on the management plan for the conservation reserves of the Albany coast

The Department of Conservation and Land Management (CALM), on behalf of the Conservation Commission of Western Australia, is in the process of preparing a new management plan for more than 40 conservation reserves of the Albany coast: West Cape Howe, Torndirrup and Waychinicup national parks, Two Peoples Bay and Mt Manypeaks nature reserves and many smaller nature reserves, including several islands. The management plan will detail the purpose of the reserves and how CALM will manage them in the long term. Likely future management strategies for proposed conservation reserves will also be considered.

Have Your Say

Public involvement in how the conservation reserves should be managed is an important part of the planning process and numerous opportunities will be provided for this to occur. You are invited to register your interest in the development of the management plan. In doing so, CALM will notify you of opportunities when you can contribute. All contributions are carefully considered and taken into account.

Although the details of the public participation process are yet to be finalised, it may, for example, include community workshops, public displays and submissions to the draft management plan. By providing your contact details we can inform you of events/opportunities as they arise and keep you up to date with our progress.

Progress can also be tracked by viewing CALM's NatureBase website: www.naturebase.net/haveyoursay.

If you wish to register your interest, or register on behalf of a group or organisation, please complete the form on this brochure and post it to the address shown.
